A hand up, not a handout.
It gives us great pleasure to present our 2010 Annual Report for Goodwill of Central Arizona. This publication offers a comprehensive overview of our history and the current programs, initiatives and leaders who will help Goodwill continue its successful track record of putting people to work. It will also outline our accomplishments reached in 2010.

As you remember, a fire destroyed our Clearance Center and Salvage Operation at our Main Campus on July 31, 2010. Our team pulled together immediately and we were able to successfully have our operations back up and running the next day. Thanks to this dedicated team, while our Salvage Operation was down briefly, it did not impact our mission services which continued to post record-breaking numbers in people served and people placed.

Last year, we provided services for 30,120 individuals and recorded 9,280 job placements throughout central Arizona.

Our 46 retail stores and one Clearance Outlet generated more than $67 million in revenue that supported our state’s economy. Moreover, through our salvage and recycling initiatives we diverted 100 million pounds of materials from going directly into Arizona’s landfills.

Goodwill was able to achieve a great accomplishment in November when we opened the Retail Operations Center (ROC) in southwest Phoenix. Shoppers are receiving great deals at the Clearance Outlet, job seekers are learning about job training and professional opportunities in the Career Center, donations are being sorted more efficiently and our Salvage Operation has grown to new heights by operating out of the 100,000 square foot of space. Ultimately, the ROC is our finest symbol of what Goodwill does in the community because thousands of Arizonans are reaping the benefits from our many services and products that we provide.

We sincerely thank our donors, shoppers, volunteers, staff and Board of Directors for supporting our Mission to Put People to Work.

By building on our Community Development and educational outreach while opening new stores, welcoming additional volunteers and providing employment/job training services to our neighbors in need, we are confident that we will achieve unprecedented growth in 2011.

Kind Regards,

Jim Teter    Jack Milligan
President & CEO    Board Chair

Goodwill Earns 2010 Best Places to Work Award

Goodwill of Central Arizona is thrilled to be recognized as one of the 2010 Best Places to Work in the Valley by the Phoenix Business Journal. Goodwill ranked #30 in the Large-Sized Company - the second year in a row that we have been recognized with this honor.

This second 2010 Best Places to Work award demonstrates that Goodwill of Central Arizona is building upon our strong track record of offering creative and competitive benefits while retaining satisfied employees who find value and meaning working at Goodwill.

“We are extremely proud to be recognized again as one of the top ‘Best Places to Work,’” said Jim Teter, President and CEO for Goodwill of Central Arizona. “Our employees work hard but they also like their environments, the benefits and the management— which makes all the difference. We look forward to improving our standing on the list next year based on employee feedback.”
Goodwill Sets New Records for People Served, Placed in 2010

As our state and nation’s economy continues to rebound, Goodwill of Central Arizona is continuing to set new highs for helping disadvantaged youth and adults.

In 2010, Goodwill of Central Arizona’s Workforce Development team provided services for 30,120 individuals and recorded 9,280 job placements throughout central Arizona. Furthermore, our Career Centers registered 103,845 visits from individuals looking for assistance with job training and educational opportunities.

Yolanda Carrothers, Vice President of Workforce Development, said she was not surprised by the 2010 figures as the staff worked very hard to serve more people.

“In 2010, we started the year with a 9.2 percent unemployment rate and by August and September, we had highs of 9.7 percent,” said Carrothers. “And the Yuma unemployment rate was much worse hovering at 26.8 percent.”

But in spite of the staggering unemployment rates, Carrothers said her staff was noticing an alarming trend by mid-year 2010.

“Our Career Centers and other workforce development agencies in the Phoenix metropolitan area were actually experiencing a slowdown in jobseekers,” stated Carrothers. “What we discovered after our conversations is that people had given up hope on their job search. They were tired of unsuccessfully trying to land jobs that just weren’t available.”

As a result, Carrothers and her entire Workforce Development team “went to the people.” Staff set up tables at Goodwill of Central Arizona stores, held recruitment events at schools and partnered with other nonprofit agencies. Goodwill’s eight job fairs conducted in Phoenix and Yuma attracted more than 3,400 individuals and more than 4,000 individuals took part in weekly employer events at the Career Centers. Moreover, the Workforce Development team advertised on television in late 2010 and were flooded with calls from people seeking information on the Senior Community Service Employment Program which serves people over 55 years of age.

The Pathways Adult Training and Employment Program was a tremendous success story for the Workforce Development department and Goodwill overall. The program, which is 100 percent funded by a $1.5M grant from the Department of Labor Employment and Training Administration through Goodwill Industries International, provided high-growth green job training to individuals living in high poverty geographic locations in Phoenix. Last year’s figures showed that 228 individuals received training in areas such as environmental literacy, weatherization, solar and Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). More than 50 percent of the trainees found work with outside firms or Goodwill of Central Arizona.

Overall, Goodwill’s Workforce Development department’s 36 human services programs are dedicated to helping youths and adults achieve their highest potential through a variety of career options, despite any barriers to employment that may exist. The Workforce Development staff offer comprehensive programs to provide individuals with the self-confidence, training and soft skills experience needed to become employable in today’s competitive labor market.

These programs and services are provided at no cost to the community.

Material and cash donations from the community make it possible for Goodwill to provide a “hand up” to Arizonans who want to prepare for and find work. Goodwill then sells your material donations in our stores and turns them into dollars that help the unskilled become skilled and the dependent move toward independence.

2010 Highlights

• Goodwill of Central Arizona was honored to be listed by Arizona Business Magazine and BestCompaniesAZ as one of the 2010 Most Admired Companies. Goodwill received this award for excelling in four key areas: workplace culture, leadership excellence, social responsibility and customer opinion.

• Being the best at what we do is what Goodwill of Central Arizona is all about! Thus, it is extremely exciting and fitting to announce that our organization recently won the Best of Phoenix® 2010 Award for being the Best Non-Boutique Thrift Store! The thrill of the hunt and low prices keep customers coming back to our Goodwill stores year after year because as the Phoenix New Times says, “there’s always a treasure to be had at the remarkably professional nonprofit chain.”

• Goodwill of Central Arizona placed 2,285 volunteers who contributed 29,345.75 work hours at our stores, career centers and job training seminars.

• Jackie Halleen, Goodwill of Central Arizona’s Vice President, Retail Operations, was identified in the 2010 edition of Arizona Woman’s “Who’s Who Top Non-Profit Organization.”
Evening of Goodwill Raises $140K for Education

Thanks to the ongoing generosity of presenting sponsor and community partner, Midstate Mechanical and a host of other supportive local businesses, the Denim and Diamonds-themed 10th Annual Evening of Goodwill was a sparkling success.

The 10th Annual Evening of Goodwill, held on October 16 at Desert Foothills in north Scottsdale, raised $140,000 - far surpassing our goal to raise $90,000 toward Goodwill’s Ecademie High School for local at-risk youth and the Barker Post-Secondary Scholarship Fund.

The 2010 Evening of Goodwill was similar to previous years. We continued our tradition of a casual, outdoor event under the stars and encouraged guests to get gussied up in their Western wear while enjoying another festive night under the Sonoran Desert sky.

The Evening of Goodwill included a thrilling silent auction, buffet-style barbecue dinner, western-themed games and live entertainment. An exciting addition to this year’s celebration was the hot-air balloon rides. Many of the guests enthusiastically lined up for the opportunity to be airborne, if only for a few moments, so they could see breathtaking nighttime views of the Valley.

Goodwill of Central Arizona applauds our community partners for helping us raise critical dollars that give our local youth and adults the opportunity for success, courage and capturing their dreams.

Moreover, our Retail Team and customers who patronize our stores should be commended for helping Goodwill raise more than $69,000 for the post-secondary scholarship fund through store raffle sales.

In addition, we appreciate the volunteers from National Charity League, Inc., Ecademie High School and Goodwill of Central Arizona for dedicating their time and energy toward making the Evening of Goodwill a hit.

“We are so proud of our program participants’ success and happy that we can help offer them the assistance they need to stay on track,” said Jim Teter, President and CEO of Goodwill of Central Arizona. “We hope everyone remembers this night as a major achievement for central Arizonans. Our community partners and sponsors made a tremendous difference with their generosity and we are confident that our honorees and program participants will never forget the impact that has been made on their futures.”

Roxanne Saldana is confident that great things are in store for her and her family thanks in part to the assistance she received from Goodwill of Central Arizona’s Career Centers.

Saldana said when she initially visited the Peoria Career Center in early 2009, she was at one of the lowest points of her young life.

“When I first came to the Goodwill Career Center, I was a struggling mom with small children at home, unemployed, and desperate,” said Saldana.

Furthermore, the 28-year-old just endured a divorce and had been laid off from her job as a cashier and food handler at Trevor Browne High School in Phoenix.

“Things were really hard,” stated Saldana. “The economy was bad and I was relying on help from my mom and the government in order to pay bills.”

At the Peoria Career Center, Saldana was able to receive coaching and advice that would help her become a more attractive candidate to local employers.

“I created a resume, used the computers to do job searches, and attended the weekly recruitments,” said Saldana. “The networking sessions were helpful because I could talk to others who were in my situation.”

Saldana utilized the Career Center’s services for more than four months before learning about a job opportunity at the El Rancho Market in north central Phoenix which opened in the summer of 2009.

“I used the Career Center’s computer to apply on the Ranch Market web page but was unable to find the new store location,” said Saldana. “Out of desperation, I took my resume and went looking for the store. I found their location and dropped off my resume. I didn’t receive a call so I went back again to talk to someone. Again, no response. After the third time going to the store, I told the store manager that I needed a job now!”

The manager eventually hired Saldana as a cashier at $7.50 per hour and she started off at 15 hours per week.

Saldana admits that the early days at El Rancho Market were not easy.

“That was a real struggle,” said Saldana. “It was so difficult to find a job that I decided no matter how tough it was that I would work very hard and prove myself to the manager in hope of getting more hours.”

After several months, she earned a promotion to head cashier and was working 40 hours a week.

“I continued to strive to be the best employee possible,” said Saldana.

Her hard work ethic paid off after working at Ranch Market for six months. The Front End Manager resigned from the store and Saldana jumped at the opportunity to fill that position. In the summer of 2010, Saldana was promoted to store manager.

Saldana urges youth and adults in Arizona who are having a hard time finding a job to explore Goodwill’s job training and employment programs. In 2009, more than 25,000 individuals benefitted from Goodwill’s workforce development services.

“I have gone from unemployed and desperate to a successful working mom able to take care of my family,” Saldana stated. “My appreciation to Goodwill for providing the career centers and all the services needed to succeed in these tough times.”
